French out of the country where they trade; and, while the trade will be lost, and, as their great goal, an eternal separation will be between the Indians and their brethren the English. The farther east that hordes the French that came down from Veaseux, another body of near 400, is coming up the Ohio, and that too French Indians, of the Chippeways & Ottawas, are coming down the St. Lawrence, to join them; and many more French are expected from Canada, the design being to establish themselves, first, their Indians, and build forts just on the back of our settlements in all our colonies, from which form, as they did from Crown-Point, they may send on their parties to kill and scalp the inhabitants, and ruin our frontier counties. Accordingly, we hear, that the back Indians in Virginia, are terrified by the murders and scalping a whole family last winter, and the killing of this man, that they have already resolved their passions, and remove to places more safety. ——— The conduct of the French in this undertaking, seems well-planned by the general disunited state of the British colonies, and the impossibility of bringing to many different governments and assemblies to agree in any firmly and constant measures for our common defence and security; while our enemies have the very great advantage of having water one division, with one council, and one power. Hence, and from the great inferiority of France, they presume that they may with impunity violate the most solemn treaties subsisting between the two powers, till even the American war ceases, and concluding their affairs, so that if they have been so cruelly treated by us, we shall never be able, without arms and children, and taking safe possession of some part of the French territory in the Gulf and Bay of Mexico or there, which I dare say would be done, and with the assistance of the British Government, and assistance in America.
